

NON-TECHINICAL EVENTS

LIGHT CAMERA ACTION

"Light, Camera, Action" can also refer to a party or board game where players act out scenes and compete for points. Players take turns being the director and choosing actors to perform a scene based on a prompt, while the other players vote on their favorite performance.

GEOGUESSER:

GeoGuesser is a geography game in which players guess locations from the given pictures. The places should be ask from any places . If the image is not findable theplayers should give the relatable answers about the image.

Eg: If the image is about "Statue of liberty" u should say where it is located.

In this game there should be two players in team.Rules are very simple,Certain time willbe given u have to find the locations .

SHIP WRECK :

In this game u should play individual.

You are given the role of Superman/ Narendra Modi etc.

The ship is sinking, and the Captain has only one Life-Jacket left.

You are on the ship with other famous celebrities/ fictional characters/ hypothetical characters.

Sink into the given character and try to escape from the sinking ship by using your impressive, convincing skills and prove that youdeserve the only Life-jacket.

Make yourself appear prominent and better than any other person/ thing on board to win the Life jacket and eventually win the event.

The judges will announce the life jacket based upon your speaking in the character

60 SECONDS FAME :

The amount of time allotted to the performers differs from college to college. It usually ranges from 30 to 60 seconds.

The rules are simple:-

The performer have to go up onstage and do absolutely anything that the crowd and the judges should like in the few seconds allotted time.

The range of performances examples mono acting, skits, talking about a topic , imitations of actors, reciting poems, telling jokes, so much more. This is one event that has something for everybody, even if you have absolutely no talent.